THE ECO VARNISH

OK, so it's not strictly organic but Zoya's range of nail varnishes is the most non-toxic around, which explains how it's made it to the shelves of The Organic Pharmacy. 'Most varnishes contain toxins you breathe in or that soak into the skin,' says co-founder of the store, Margo Marrone. 'But the Zoya range has far fewer than normal. It's even safe for pregnant women to use, unlike most polishes.' And at only £8.95 a bottle, no wonder it's the number two selling brand in the US, with Victoria Beckham and Gwen Stefani both fans.

THE OSCAR WINNER

We know a beauty range can't actually win an Oscar, but seals of approval from the organic organisations of the world are just as hard to come by, and Origins' new collection has already scooped certificates from the UK, France and the US. We love lightweight Origins Organics Nourishing Face Lotion, £31, which has been flying off the shelves in Bloomingdales and Macy's in New York. The ingredients list reads like a recipe of goodness with organic clove, rose, lavender, patchouli and red thyme essential oils to give skin a moisturising burst.

THE MIRACLE OIL

New Zealand is the country to watch when it comes to organic skincare as 67 per cent of Kiwi women have already made the switch to chemical-free brands. That's why Antipodes Divine Face Oil, £18.95, has made it straight on to our organic hot list. That and the fact that its main ingredient is 100 per cent pure extra virgin avocado oil. 'Avocado's not just for salads, you know,' says founder, Elizabeth Barbalich. 'It has higher levels of the wrinkle-busting antioxidant vitamin E than any other fruit or vegetable, and sinks into the skin really quickly, hydrating without being greasy.' Apply this wonder oil day and night. You just need to rub a few drops into your fingertips and then lightly stroke them over your face, neck and décolletage.
